

ABSTRACT

An improved technique of interfacing a computer lighting device to a control computer is disclosed, wherein a hardware device is interposed between the control computer and the lighting device. The hardware device handles certain functions in hardware, thereby permitting the 5 microprocessor at the lighting device to incur substantially less processing load.